one month at a time

February

A few facts (from Wikipedia.org):

- It is the shortest month of the year, and always less than 30 days. Sounds like a great time to show height variation. Get in a few full body shots of yourself and your friends & family. Show who's tallest, shortest and who is in between.
- February was named after the latin term februum, meaning purification. Pure is a powerful word. Pure joy, pure fun, pure kindness, what is the last pure thing in your life?
- This month is the only month to add day every four years. To determine if it's a leap year, you see if the year is divisible by 4, but not divisible by 100 unless it is also divisible by 400... shew I think I'll stick to google to see if it's a leap year. Next year is a leap year, What do you think you will be doing a year from now?

Did you know?

February's birthstone is the amethyst. The amethyst was named from the greek word meaning "intoxicated". The Greeks believed drinking from vessels made of amethyst prevented intoxication. (Hard to believe the empire fell...) Up until the 18th century these gemstones were considered highly valuable, in the same vein as diamonds and sapphires. Then more resources for amethysts were discovered in Brazil and it was no longer considered rare. Why does rarity determine value? What are some things in your life that you can never have too much of?
